Welcome to the Ethics Section’s featured academic work on the intersection of neurology and medical ethics. We hope you will enjoy these links to what we have found to be interesting, controversial, and compelling work.

The interplay between ethics, the nervous system, and the social and medical context in which we treat neurological disease is both touching and thought provoking. Here is a brief glimpse into this growing area of importance.

